South Coventry School Closed—Diphtheria in District.

South Coventry has several cases of diphtheria and upon recommendation of Health Officer W. L. Higgins the schools have been closed in the Ripley Hill district of the town. The cases were first noted some six weeks ago, and there have been eight or ten, but only two persons are known to have the disease at the present time.

There have been two cases in George Freeman's family, both boys, who are now practically over it, but still have a slight trace of paralysis. There have been cases in the families of Fred Ayer, Joseph Barrett and two in W. Eugene Richardson's. A number of others have been afflicted in a mild way. It is deemed advisable to close the school in order that any spread of the disease might be forestalled.

George McCann, a cotton weaver, about 30 years of age, was found dead in a grove on land of the Quinebaug company near Dyer street, early Monday evening. A friend, Arthur Bardeau, aged 15 and 12 years, found the body. They had noticed McCann lying in the grove since about 10 o'clock Monday, but presumed he was sleeping. When he did not show signs of awakening as night came on, they investigated, and when the body was pulled from over McCann's head and face, it was seen that he was dead.

Chief George M. Pilling and Medical Examiner Henry B. Robb were notified. They found McCann lying on his back, with several newspapers spread beneath him, evidently to keep away the mosquitoes. The dead man presumably went to sleep Sunday night and never awakened. He was last seen on Sunday afternoon near the east entrance to the footbridge of the Quinebaug company and at that time appeared to be very ill.

McCann came here from Warren, R. I., about the first of the month. He has been sleeping in barns and outbuildings since that time and had little to eat as far as can be learned. McCann was well known in Killingly where he had worked in different cotton mills. He was about time to cease their breach of the peace.

They Love an Outing—But, Oh, That Hike!
An exasperated, footsore, tired and hungry group of Danielson people with a perfectly developed never again feeling, limped into the borough about 3 o'clock Monday morning after a hike over the highway from Moosup. They had been spending Sunday in Providence, and a party of about twenty had come to the city and were returning to Danielson on a train that is supposed to get into the city in the afternoon. The party was on the train at 10:10 p. m. at Washington R. I. the cylinder head on the locomotive blew out and the train was stopped for some time. A few minutes before midnight.

At that time the last car for Danielson had long departed and Moosup was locked up for the night. The dozen or more Danielson people in the party, who were expected to be at the hotel, were left to make their way to the usual hour or tell the reason why. They tried various promising means of getting to Danielson without success and at last resort set out through the dust to make their home stations on foot. To some of them the trip was like trying for the north pole, only a little less so. Some of them were blistered feet around town Monday and some promises made to stay away from Providence for a while at last!
